What makes Huntsville interesting is its unique, one-of-a-kind, local restaurants; Spencer's Tall Trees, Main Street Local Kitchen, That Little Place by the Lights, On the Docks, 3 Guys and a Stove, Eclipse Dining Room . . . And for those craving McDonalds, Harvey's, Swiss Chalet and Starbucks, these chains coexist side by side the maverick foodie destinations that dot the Huntsville landscape.

Craft Breweries Serving Up Cold Ones

Craft breweries are a big draw in Huntsville. The Huntsville Brew House and Canvas Brewing Company join area breweries like Muskoka Brewery in Bracebridge, Clear Lake Brewery in Emsdale, Lake of Bays Brewing Company and Sawdust Brewing Company in Gravenhurst, to offer crisp, unique beers that define this growing cottage industry.

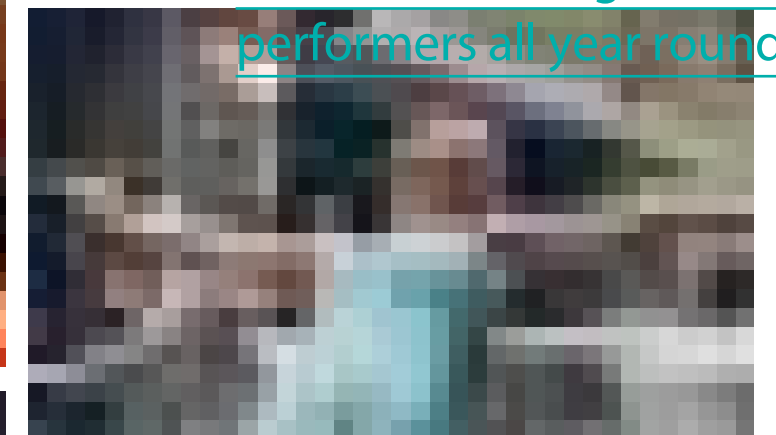

Huntsville is Art

Inspired by the scenery and the art colony vibe of the town, local artists and visiting artists flock here. Famed Canadian artist Tom Thomson and his successors, the Group of Seven painted here frequently. In fact, a Group of Seven Outdoor Gallery in Huntsville features over 40 outdoor murals celebrating the work of these Canadian icons.

Artistry permeates Huntsville's culture, attracting artists and performers all year round.

Huntsville is well known for its many arts festivals, including Huntsville Festival of the Arts. Other arts activities include the annual Muskoka Novel Marathon, Film North (International Film Festival), and most recently Nuit Blanche North, produced by the Huntsville Festival of the Arts and Edge of the Woods Theatre. The town has a new municipal centre and performing arts theatre, the Algonquin Theatre. The theatre provides space for local dance, music, theatre and school activities.
